first the onset of apoplexy, etc., a surperstition based on the assumption that during sleep the brain is normally congested. There is, no doubt, such a thing as congestive sleep, but during normal sleep the brain is aniemic. When a person has taken a fairly abundant lunch or dinner the stomach demanda aspecial afflux of blood wherewith to accomplish its work of digestion, no organ can more easily comply with that demand, than the brain which when in full activity, is suffused with a maximum amount of the vital fluid. But a deriyation of blood from the brain to the stomach can only take place, except in exceptionally full-blooded and vigorous persons, on the condition that the cerebral functions be meanwhile partially or wholly suspended. Hence many people after taking dinner feel indisposed for mental action and not a few long for sleep. persons; he was conscious of his real self reclining on a lounge, and of why he was there; his double was in a vast building made of splendid gold and marbles, splendidly brilliant, and beautiful beyond all description. He felt an extreme gratification, and believed himself in heaven.

This double peronality suddenly vanished, but reappeared in a few minutes. His real self was undergoing rhythmical spasms throughout his body; the double was a marvelous instrument, producing sounds of exquisitely weetness and perfect rythm. Then sleep ensued, and all ended.

Upon another occasion sleep and waking came and went so rapidly that they seemed to be confused. His double seemed to be a sea, bright, and tossing as the wind blew; then a continent. Again he smoked a double dose, and sat at his table, pencil in hand, to record the effects. This time he lost all conception of time. He arose to open a door; this seemed to take a million years. He went to pacify an angry dog, and endless ages seemed to have gone on his return. Conceptions of space retained their normal character. He felt an unusual fullness of mental impressions—enough to fill volumes. He understood clairyoyance, hypnotism and all else. He was not one man or two, but several men living at the same time in different places, with different occupations. There is a widesoread superstition, cherished by a great majority of the people, that to sleep immediately after having taken food is to endanger health, to favor the onset of apoplexy, etc., a superstition based on the assumption that during sleep the brain is normally congested. There is, no doubt, such a thing as congestive sleep, but during normal sleep the brain is aniemic. When a sleep the brain is aniemic. When a

Before another Presidential election Dakota, Montana and Washington will be admitted into the Union, which of itself would be easily decisive, but the census of 1890 will give the Nation a new apportionment, to the great advantage of the Democratic South. Between these two great and inevitable facts there is no danger of any other Presidential contest with the Republican party so heavily handicapped as it was in 1888, and that, too, however tenacious the Democracy may be in maintaining its organization intact.

Personal. Dear Bro. Meek, Ed. "The Central Methodist," Catlettaburg, Ky.:
I see in the last "Central" that you want a sick headache remedy. I suffered from sick headache, almost from infancy, and tried every remedy I could get, but never found anything to do me good until I used Simmons Liver Regulator. I feel for anyone that suffers with that terrible disease, and I hope you will give it a trial.—C. S. Morris, Brownsville, W. Va.

I have had catarrh for twenty years, and used all kinds of remedies without relief. Mr. Smith, druggist, of Little Falls, recommended Ely's Cream Balm. The effect of the first application was majeral, it allayed the inflammation and the next morning my head was as clear as a bell. One bottle has done me so much good that I am convinced its use will effect a permanent cure. It is soothing, pleasant and easy to apply, and I strongly urgo its use by all suiterers.

action and not a few long for sleep. The already partially annexing brain would fain yield up to the stomach a further supply of blood and yield itself up to refreshing sleep. Doing so it gains new strength; meanwhile digestion proceeds energetically, and soon body and mind are again equipped to continue in full force the battle of life. But superstition, the child of ignorance, intervenes; declares that sleep during digestion is dangerous; admonishes the would-be sleeper to struggle against their perilous inclination, and though telling them that after dinner they may sit awhile assures them of the adage: "After supper walk a mile."

them, and ignore the suggestion onever to them by the lower animals, who have always practiced the lessons of sound physiology by always sleeping after feeding whenever they are allowed to do so. Hence the human brain and the human stomach of such victims contend with each other during the digestive process. The brain impelled by superstition, strives to work and demands blood to work with, while the stomach, stimulated by its contents, strives to carry on its marvelous chemistry and demands an ample supply of blood for the purpose. The result of the straggle is that neither is able to do its work well. The brain is enfeebled by being denied its natural rest during the digestive process, and the healthy functions of the stomach degenerate into dyspepsia.
